Fine Dining Experiences in Store for Superior Care

The guest speaker was Jason Ison, the new executive chef for Superior Care Home. Superior Care is the only facility of its kind in our area with an executive chef. Working with Superior Care owners Helen Sims and Mike Sims, Chef Ison will initiate a new style of dining for residents at the new of Superior Care Home facility, which opens this fall in the Paducah Commerce Park.

The facility is designed and constructed with "neighborhoods" or "communities" serving residents with different needs: long-term care, short-term rehabilitation, memory and Alzheimer's care, and outpatient rehabilitation. Each "community" will have cook-to order-service and restaurant-style menus with tremendous variety. He will work with the Superior Care team to meet the diverse nutritional and dietary needs of residents in appealing ways. He envisions a beautiful dining room experience with special touches such as ice sculptures, chocolate sculptures, and beautiful desserts.

Chef Ison said that Helen Sims "wants her new facility to be the best, and I am going to help her get there." He wants to exceed the expectations of the residents, and he has already started at the long-time Clay Street location. Chef Ison brings a wealth of experience to his new role. He has worked with and been trained by internationally prestigious chefs in top restaurants and hotels in Chicago; Sun Valley, Idaho; and elsewhere. One of his favorite famous customers was actor Gary Sinise, whom he found to be courteous and kind. Chef Ison has management experience in restaurants, resorts, and casinos – including Harrah's Metropolis. Chef Ison is married to Paducah-native Kristie Ison, dining room director of the Paducah Country Club.
