Thoughts On Achieving Greatness

By John Hutcheson

Dalton Rotarians joined members of the Hamilton Business Alliance in a Forum held at the Hamilton Medical Center for a presentation entitled "How to Achieve Greatness at Work and in Life" by Dr. Kevin Elko. Dr. Elko holds a bachelor's degree in Biology, Education, and Coaching from California University of Pennsylvania and two master's degrees and the doctorate from West Virginia University. His work focuses on helping organizations improve in leadership, goal setting, vision creation, and many other motivational areas, and he has served as a consultant for a large number of prestigious corporations and collegiate and professional sports organizations. He is the author of five books, of which the most recent is The Sender, based on his involvement with Indianapolis Colts Head Coach Chuck Pagano's battle with cancer.

Dr. Elko is an extraordinarily dynamic and compelling speaker, and his remarks overflowed with amusing and catchy but deeply wise one-liners. He stressed the need for his audience to rid their minds of "mental clutter" which impedes living their most effective lives, and he pointed out that each person lives either in circumstance or in vision. It is crucially important to claim one's own vision by developing a personal "script" to be used in the course of each day, always bearing in mind the formula of $E + R = O$ —Event plus Response equals Outcome. Every task or obligation should be regarded from the standpoint of "I get to" rather than "I have to." More than anything else, success is the result of "grit," which is simply perseverance and follow-through. Success and adversity alike must be met with the forward-looking perspective of "so what, now what?" In relating to others, individuals should stop being interesting and instead be interested, just as they should stop looking for blessings in their lives in favor of being a blessing in someone else's life.
