ShelterBox

A message from ShelterBox USA President Kerri Murray:

While my messages typically have a hopeful and optimistic tone, I am at a loss for words regarding the violence that is unfolding in Eastern Ghouta, Syria.

A doctor in the region has called these recent attacks, "the massacre of the 21st century." It is estimated that more than 250 people were killed in the rebel-held territory of Ghouta in just 48 hours, with Monday, Feb. 19th being the deadliest day since the chemical attack on the region in 2013. More than 50 children and 106 civilians died on the following day.

In the midst of these tragic events, ShelterBox remains steadfast in our commitment to helping families caught in the conflict.

Since 2012, ShelterBox has supported 41,460 households displaced by the conflict in Syria.

Right now, we're providing aid to families who have left their homes with nothing but the clothes on their backs. We're providing shelter to families with homes destroyed by bombs and bullets. We're supplying essential school supplies to both students and teachers.

We're also deploying seasonal aid like Winterized Kits that include winter mattresses, thermal blankets, solar lights, kitchen sets, tools, and children's clothing (including coats, thermal tops and bottoms, and insulated onesies for babies).

You can read more about our critical role in the Syrian Refugee Crisis.

Today, there are millions more living in Syria and neighboring countries like Iraq who have no shelter, nowhere to go and no hope for the future.

I'm reaching out to request your charitable support. With your help today, we can keep providing families with shelter and, most importantly, a safe place to call home.

Thank you for your continued support.
